Negro Convicted as Accessory

in Mary Phagan's Murder

Earns Time Off

Jim Conley is due to be a free man June 2, twenty days before the Date set for the Execution of Leo M. Frank.

Conley, now out at the Bellwood Camp, where he is working in a Rock Quarry, near the camp, began serving his 12 Months' Sentence for Accessory after the Fact in the murder of Mary Phagan, July 20, 1914.

Convicts get four days a month off for good behavior; Conley's Convict Record so far has not a single black mark against it, and he has already earned 44 days for 11 months of good behavior. If he keeps his Record clear, he will have earned 48 days off, thus terminating his Sentence on June 2 instead of July 20.
